CARPENTIER TO SAVE ENERGY

Frenchman Uses Own Methods—Dempsey Has 10 Pounds to Lose.

Georges Carpentier, in training for his bout with Jack Dempsey, the stakes of which are the heavy-weight championship of the world, is upstaging nearly all training traditions. He has his own methods and is training in the way he has been able to best himself for previous fights. And it must be remembered how he handled Bombardier Wells and Beckett in recent fights, as well as the manner in which he polished off Battling Levinsky.

The old time trainers used to have their proteges go through trial fights a short time before the big fight was to be engaged in, make their charges don huge sweaters in which to do ten miles on the road and then have them punch the bag an hour or so previous to the "trial" encounters.

But Carpentier is foregoing all of this. While he is keeping himself in trim, he is working only to "conserve his energy," to store and save it up for the time he will need it against Dempsey. And perhaps there is something to his line of thinking. If the recent fight history he has made is to be any sort of a criterion and if he defeats Dempsey, it might mean that training for future bouts will be altered to conform with the Carpentier idea.

The result of this system of the Frenchman's is that he has won all of his late engagements in a short time. He undertakes this stored-up energy in what those who have seen him perform call an "explosive" style. It doesn't take him long to finish his opponent.

Some of Carpentier's close friends who are now with him aver that the European champion never extends himself to the limit when in training. He doesn't force himself to use full speed or to hit his hardest. He might put over a hard blow now and then, but he never presses his advantage. This is the opposite to Dempsey's style.

The American fights every day when he is in training. He likes to have sparring partners in his camp who can take a lick and give a good wallop in return.

And with all the work Dempsey has been doing he is still weighing in the neighborhood of 200 pounds, something like 198, to be exact. Dempsey weighed 183 when he fought Willard in Toledo, three pounds lighter than he should have been, the champion has been recorded as saying since then. He was trained a little too "fine" for this bout, and does not intend to repeat this offense.

Dempsey weighs now about the same as he did this length of time before the Willard fight. From now on, he intends to gradually work his weight down to below 190, but not too far below.

Carpentier weighs 174, six pounds heavier than when he boxed Levinsky. He is two pounds heavier than when he landed in this country, Carpentier having said in the early stages of his training that he did not intend to reduce any in weight.

Carpentier is not worrying any about the coming encounter. His lack of nerves is explained by his good condition, for, in fact, Carpentier keeps himself in good condition all the time, and he is a clean liver. A man trained too fine is nervous, and this lack of nervousness in the Frenchman is only another indication of his good condition.

RUTH MAKES NEW RECORD Home Run King Credited With the Longest Hit in History.

When "Babe" Ruth hoisted a baseball over the center field fence at the Polo Grounds Tuesday in the game between the Yanks and the Detroit Tigers, he is credited with having made the longest hit in the history of baseball. John Foster, former secretary of the Giants, who has been interested in major league baseball for more than thirty years, and Al Munroe, baseball statistician, are the authorities for this statement.

The distance from the home plate to the center field fence at the Polo Grounds is 416 feet. As Ruth's hit went 20 feet over the fence, it traveled 436 feet on the fly, a new world's record.

Joe Jackson, formerly of the Chicago White Sox, hit a ball over the right field fence of the Polo Grounds between the first and second innings, and Fred Merkle, former Giant first baseman, hit a ball over the left field fence, both of which hits were the first of their kind. Dave Robertson, former center fielder of the Giants, now with the Cubs, was the first man to hit a ball into the right field bleachers of the Polo Grounds, his hit traveling approximately 400 feet.

PADDOCK REFUSES HONOR Votes for Fellow Athlete to Lead California U. Track Men.

Charles W. Paddock, the world's greatest sprinter, refused the captaincy of the University of California track team which was offered him several days ago.

His reason for refusing was that he had had enough honors bestowed upon him by trips to Belgium, France, England and in the United States. "I have been honored enough," said Paddock. "Some one else should be elected." He voted for "Bill" Genderson, a fellow track man, who was elected captain for next year.

PAULETTE WINS TENNIS SINGLES

Championship Decided in Final Sets Played Yesterday Afternoon.

George W. Paulette is the tennis singles champion of the University, he having defeated Richard Y. Jones two sets out of three yesterday afternoon on the University courts.

Jones, whose right hand was infected a little more than two weeks ago, at the time the finals were to have been played, won the first set 7 to 5, but succumbed to Paulette's attack in the next two sets, 6 to 2 and 8 to 6. The match was hard fought throughout. Jones was handicapped to some extent, several blisters on his playing hand having slowed up his play.

Play in the doubles tournament started yesterday, Turner and Gookins' eliminating Fietman and Young in straight sets, 6 to 0, 6 to 2 in the first match in this tourney.

Ten teams are entered: Spuehler and Shirk, Lee and Lee, Davis and Elkins, Fisher and Geesen, Hess and Bullock, Sims and Jones, Cheney and Parangana, Paulette and Fulbright, Fietman and Young and Turner and Gookins.

There have also been several defaults. Spuehler and Shirk having defaulted to Lee and Lee. Davis and Elkins defeated Fisher and Geesen 6 to 4 and 6 to 2. Cheney and Parangana won from Lee and Lee by default.

Today Hess and Bullock are scheduled to play Sims and Jones and Davis and Elkins are booked to play Paulette and Fulbright.

The winner of the Hess-Bullock and Sims-Jones match will clash with Cheney and Parangana, while the victors of the Davis-Elkins and Paulette-Fulbright match will cross rackets with Turner and Gookins. This will put the tourney to the semi-finals at the end of these matches.

It is possible that the finals will be reached and played this afternoon, as most of the men have signified their willingness to finish the play by tonight if possible. Otherwise the tournament will hold over until the first of next week.

GIRLS ASPIRE TO THE STAGE

Many Apply to Go on Vaudeville Tour With Mrs. Jameson.

Advertising pays, if the results obtained by Mrs. J. D. Jameson, who recently advertised for twelve girls to form a vaudeville company under her management, may be taken as an indication. Mrs. Jameson, who has had considerable stage experience, is planning to organize a vaudeville sketch to take on the road during the summer months, if she can secure twelve girls in Columbia who meet her requirements. She has had requests from several managers that she return to the stage in an individual act in case she is unsuccessful in her quest for other talent.

Up to Thursday night, Mrs. Jameson had received applications from twenty-six girls. Since then she has received a number of additional applications, but she did not care to add any more names to her list for the time being at least. She expects to hold tryouts for the girls on her list next week, and she is confident that she will find twelve girls with sufficient ability to be accepted for her proposed company.

In addition to displaying ability as vaudeville actresses, the girls must have the consent of their parents to join the company and must sign a strict contract to fulfill the terms of their agreement with Mrs. Jameson.

Additional contracts for amusement will be made when the committee meets again next week.
